—Why is gold like the prodigal son? Because it's returning to par.

—Why is the peacock like the figure 9? It is nothing without the tail.

—When do two and two make more than four? When they make 22.

—Why is a note in back like a blade of grass? It matures by falling down.

—What trees are those which, when burst up, are exactly what they were before? Ashes.

—Why are some people like eggs? Because they are too full of themselves to hold anything else.

—Why is a man who lets houses likely to have a good many cousins? Because he has ten ants.

—To what port is a man sailing when he is like an importunate lover? When he is bound to have.

—Whose best works are most trampled on? A shoemaker's, because good shoes last longer than bad ones.

—What is the difference between an auction and sea-sickness? The one is the sale of effects, and the other is the effects of a sail.

—Mrs. Partington says few persons suffer from suggestion of the brain now-a-days.

—Next to setting up a fool in popular estimation the most difficult thing is to pull him down again.

—A man can't help what is done behind his back," as the tramp said when he was kicked out of doors.

—"How you lag behind, Cissy?"

—"Yes, Mummy! My poor toe is so bad!"

—"Which toe is it?"

—"My eldest, Mummy!"

—"Picnic sandwiches" are the latest.

—"They are made," says the Wyoming County Herald, "by taking a good looking fellow and putting him between two jealous girls." Well-bred ones, we trust.

—A good old Quaker lady, after listening to the extravagant yarns of a store-keeper as long as her patience would allow, said to him, "Friend H., what a pity it is that it is a sin to lie when it seems so necessary in thy business."

—An old darkey fishing on a wharf at Galveston was heard talking to the fish he was swimming around his line in this fashion: "Give me a bite, honey; de children am a crying down to my house, and I tell you it's fish or nothin' in dat establishment."

—The peculiarity of the fly is that he always returns to the same spot; but it is characteristic of the mosquito that he always returns to another spot. Thus he differs with the leopard, which does not change his spots. This is an important fact in natural history.

—"What do you know about the prisoner?" asked the judge. "I don't know nothin' 'bout him, judge, only he's bigoted." "Bigoted?" said his honor. "Yes, sah." "What do you mean by 'bigoted'?" "Well, judge," explained the witness, "he knows too much for one man, an' not 'nuff for two."

—When James Boswell took Dr. Johnson to his father's house in Scotland, Lord Auchinleck remarked that Jamie had brought an odd kind of a chiel wi' him. "Sir," said Boswell, "he is the grand luminary of our hemisphere—quite a constellation, sir." "Urra Major, the Great Bear, I suppose," said the old judge.

—"Did you say I was the biggest liar you ever knew?" fiercely asked a ruffian of a counsel who had been skinning him in his address to the jury. "Yes, I did," replied the counsel, and the crowd eagerly watched for the expected fight. "Well, then," said the ruffian, "all I've got to say is that you could have never known my brother Jim."

—A porter knocked violently at the door of a certain room at the Catekill Mountain House at half-past four o'clock in the morning. "Well, well," screamed the man inside, jumping out of bed; "what is it—fire, murder or sickness?" "Sunrise, sir," said the porter. "Thank heaven," exclaimed the man, "thank heaven it is nothing worse!" And he got back into bed.

—A Glasgow worthy who had got into a scrape was sent for a period to jail, and was asked, after his release, as to how he had "got on." "Well," quoth he, "ye see, a body cannae have everything in this life; and I'm no gaun to misca' the place—no mo'. For a' the time I was there—just two months, by-the-bye—I was weel protected frae the wiles o' a wicked wail outside, while my bread was aye g'iven me, an' my water sure."

—During the session of a temperance meeting in a neighboring town, one of the persons who occupied the stage was an enthusiastic deacon who frequently interrupted the speakers by yelling: "Thank heaven for that!" One gentleman was called upon, who arose and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I am heart and soul in this cause, and feel that it will be a great benefit to this place." "Thank heaven for that!" yelled the deacon. "But, ladies and gentlemen," he continued, "I am going to say that it will be impossible for me to address you this evening." "Thank heaven for that!" said the absent-minded deacon; and then the chairman took him outdoors and had two men sit on him.

PAUL AT CORINTH.

SUNDAY, SEPT. 2, 1877.—ACTS XVIII: 1-11.

THE ARRIVAL AT CORINTH. After these things, i. e., the experiences at Athens related in the previous chapter, Paul was now on his second missionary tour. Leaving Antioch A. D. 51, he had gone, with Silas as a companion, through Cilicia, Lyconia, and Galatia to Troas, whence he sailed to Philippi. Having visited Thessalonica and Berea, where he left Silas and Timothy with the command that they follow him as soon as possible, he himself seems to have taken ship to Athens which, after a sojourn of a few days—Wiesler says fourteen—he left for Corinth, where he remained a year and a half, or from the latter part of A. D. 52 to the beginning of A. D. 55. Claudius Caesar was Emperor of Rome.

Corinth was a colony, a sort of miniature Rome. It was the capital of Achaia, one of the provinces into which Greece had been divided. It was also the residence of the proconsul. It was forty-five miles from Athens, and with a fair wind the voyage by sea can be made in from three to five hours. Even in Paul's time the voyage would not have occupied more than two days. Situated on the isthmus which connects Greece proper with the Morea or the Peloponnese, it commanded the trade of two seas, and was the military key of the country. It was anciently famous for wealth, luxury, philosophy, and vice, having the reputation of being the most dissolute city in Greece. It was at the head of the Achaean League. Maltreating the Roman ambassadors, it was utterly destroyed by the Consul Mummius B. C. 146, the same year with the destruction of Carthage, but was rebuilt and colonized B. C. 46, by Julius Caesar, and by him rapidly pushed forward into something of its former greatness. It was this "new city which Paul visited, and from which he wrote the Epistles to the Thessalonians and the Romans. As of old, it was a place of great mental and commercial activity, and was celebrated for the wealth and the vice of its inhabitants.

Paul's Companions in Labor: Aquila and Priscilla, whom Paul met here, were among his most valued helpers at Ephesus (vs. 18, 26; 1 Cor. xvi: 19) and at Rome. (Rom. xvi: 3.) They were natives of Pontus, a province on the Black Sea, and one of the provinces whose inhabitants were represented in Jerusalem at Pentecost (Acts ii: 9). If Aquila and Priscilla were not Christians prior to the apostle's arrival at Corinth, they soon became Christians and entered heartily into his work. The bond of a common trade and a common nationality brought them together, while their common faith kept them together. "Priscilla," says Abbott, "was a woman of marked ability, being not only mentioned as sharing in the hospitality of the family, but also in the theological instruction of Apollos. From the fact that she is always mentioned first it has been inferred that she was the more energetic of the two." The chain of events by which these persons were made acquainted is quite providential. In accordance with the demands of the Rabbinic law Paul had been taught a trade, and one peculiar to his native province. That trade not only ministered to his necessities, but secured his independence and gave him a home in a most worthy family, and a family which had been sent on from Italy in order that he might be its guest. We do not know by what decree the Jews were excluded from Rome; perhaps that mentioned by Seneca and occasioned by the misdeeds of one Chrestus. It did not remain long in force, yet long enough to furnish Paul a home in Corinth, and two of the most consistent and efficient of his future co-laborers. Apparently soon after his arrival at Corinth, Silas and Timothy joined him in his work.

The purpose of the visit to Corinth: Not to make tents, but to reason in the synagogue every Sabbath-day. Paul was not ashamed of his trade. He gloried in the independence it gave him (1 Cor. ix: 6; 2 Cor. xi: 7). But he regarded it simply as a means to an end. His main business was to preach "Christ and him Crucified" (1 Cor. ii: 2). He sought to reach both Jews and Greeks. The imperfect tense, "he abode," "wrought," "reasoned," shows how persistently he sought to reach them, not once or twice, but as a constant habit. The arrival of Silas and Timothy found him "pressed in spirit," or as a later and better reading has it, "pressed in the word," i. e., engaged with his work. The meaning, Alford thinks, is this: "He was anxiously occupied in discoursing to the Jews, was more than usually absorbed in the work of testifying to them, a crisis in this work being imminent, which resulted in their rejection of the word of life." The presence of Silas and Timothy must have been a great relief to his burdened spirit, both in the way of sympathy and of real aid in preaching the gospel. (See 1 Cor. ii: 3; 2 Cor. i: 19; 1 Thes. iii: 6.)

Jewish Opposition: It was open, blasphemous. Paul acted upon the principle involved in the command, "Whoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that city, shake off the dust of your feet" (Matt. x: 14). He left the synagogue, shook his raiment, as if to declare that the very dust was defiling, and turned to the Gentiles.
